Heliospectra AB (publ) Interim management statement January – March 2015

CEO's comments:

Slowly but surely, the investment into sales and marketing of our new LX60 product is beginning to gain momentum. During 2014, the company had a turnover of SEK 3.1 million and in Q1 this year, we have already turned over SEK 2.1 million.

It is important to remember that the sale of sophisticated systems takes time as we focus on larger customers who perform more thorough assessments. A grower who is investing in a new system needs to undertake practical testing during several growing batches and sometimes over several seasons. Simpler plants like lettuce take about a month whereas medicinal plants can take up to four months. The results must then be evaluated.

Therefore, we have our systems out with growers, both in Europe and in North America and we spend a lot of time and resources on our potential customers. In January, we saw the result of this work when a North American grower of medicinal plants placed a follow-up order of about SEK 1 million.

One of the significant differences between Heliospectra and other products on the market is that we sell a system. The system is made up of an advanced controllable lamp to which we then add sensors and software. This means that we build up an established base of customers to whom we can then sell more and create a lucrative repeat business model. The customer's largest investment is of course the lamps in which the greatest cost is the hardware. With the lamp alone, the customer gains a number of benefits such as energy savings, quality improvements etc. We can then offer the customer further improvements for a lower cost, as at that stage it's more about pure software. Heliospectra develops all its software in-house and for any partnership work we do, for example with Chalmers, we own all the rights.

Heliospectra is careful to protect as many of our intellectual property rights as we can, employing a patent strategy that we have drawn up together with our advisors Prospero and Awapatent. This means that we apply for patents where this is relevant but that we sometimes choose not patent things such as algoritms as we want to keep these completely secret.

As already stated, the company is well positioned. We have great staff, finished products with a good reputation on the market, strong main owners and a fast-growing market.

Staffan Hillberg, CEO Heliospectra AB
